Northeast Building Named After Finard Family

Capping the capital campaign report at the 69th annual meeting was the announcement that the hospital's newest building has been named after Murray and Mildred Finard, whose major donation made its completion possible. The four-story building, wrapping around the Yamins Building, was previously known as the Northeast Building.

The lower level of the Finard Building houses the hospital's newly constructed radiation therapy unit. Before moving to its new location in June of 1984, the unit had been located in the basement of the Sherman Building.

Occupying the first floor is the newly renovated and expanded Berenson Emergency Unit. The expansion of the unit from the Gryzmish Building into the Finard Building was completed in May of 1984.

The second floor houses the relocated medical records department which now affords staff members twice as much space as its former location on the first floor of the Rabb Building. Medical records moved to the Finard Building in June of 1984.

The third floor of the Finard Building holds two of the four recently consolidated clinical pathology laboratories, hematology and chemistry. The new location provides lab staff closer proximity to their affiliates, the microbiology lab and the Schwartz Blood Bank. The labs in the Finard Building moved from their previous locations in June of 1984.

A remarkable year

It was a remarkable year for Beth Israel Hospital, and the events of 1984 dramatically illustrate the continuing theme of Beth Israel's annual meeting "From Strength to Strength." At the 69th annual meeting held in November at the Marriott Hotel in Newton, principal speakers Stanley H. Feldberg, chairman of the capital campaign, and Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin, president of Beth Israel, described in detail the movement from strength to strength as The Project enters its final phase and Beth Israel begins corporate restructuring.

A capacity audience of over 600 friends of the hospital, at the largest annual meeting in Beth Israel's recent history, heard Feldberg announce: "Beth Israel has reached and passed its original goal for The Project and is now at $16.1 million. All contributions in excess of the original $12.3-million goal will be directed to a special capital fund established by the executive committee." He added, "Even though we have reached our fiscal goal for The Project, there is much in the way of capital work that needs to be done to continue along the lines set forth four years ago."

A dramatic moment at the meeting was Feldberg's announcement that the Northeast Building, the most recent major building component of The Project, had been named after Mildred and Murray Finard, in honor of their gift to the hospital. "The Finard Building will forever reflect the generosity and devotion of an illustrious family, one that numbers among it members Mildred and Murray's son, William Finard, who is a trustee of the hospital." The Finard Building houses a new and expanded radiation therapy unit, the newly renovated Berenson Emergency Unit, the relocated and enlarged medical records department, the hospital's clinical laboratories, and an expanded Morse Medical Intensive Care Unit.

"The effort that has gone into making the hospital a welcoming, comfortable, and efficient place is exemplified by The Project," added Eliot I. Snider, chairman of the board. "This in turn speaks to perhaps the most significant contribution to the character of the hospital — the care and commitment that it has always received from the community that has nourished the hospital from the beginning." Snider singled out Feldberg's leadership of the capital campaign, referring to him as "a symbol of all that has gone into this prodigious effort," and awarding him a citation commending "... his brilliant conception and fulfillment of the capital funding efforts which have made possible The Project. "

Dr. Rabkin closed the meeting with an address illustrating a movement toward preserving the strength of a modern Beth Israel through corporate restructuring and the new Beth Israel Corporation. At a time when pressures are mounting on hospitals to maintain a positive bottom line and do all that is felt to be their community responsibility, Rabkin reported, "Costs of care in this country and elsewhere are rising, and, in the eyes of many who pay for that care today, can no longer be sustained. And when care is too costly, research and teaching lose support, and progress and quality begin to lose out."

He noted that hospitals are beginning to ask the question, "Should we not form some other related organization which is not a hospital, which is not bound down as we are, and which has the capacity to act in new ways with more freedom to achieve for us the gains we cannot make directly?" Out of these thoughts came the establishment of the Beth Israel Corporation, a nonprofit and tax-exempt corporation that Rabkin describes as "a new corporation that is not a hospital but which can create the umbrella under which health care providers can gather, relate, and coordinate, increasing their chances to be efficient and effective in fulfillment of their own institutional missions."

Housed on the building's fourth floor is the newly expanded Morse Medical Intensive Care Unit. The coronary care unit's original site was on the fourth floor of the Gryzmish Building, and its most recent temporary location was on the ninth floor of the Reisman Building. The expansion provides the unit with a 12-bed location for patients with acute heart disease, including those who have undergone cardiac procedures or are in danger of cardiac arrest.

A mechanical suite occupies the fifth level of the Finard Building. The floor houses all of the heating, air conditioning, and ventilation systems that support the lower floors.

The Finard Building

"Although the Finard Building and the landscaping that surrounds it have been finished, there are still some phases of this portion of The Project which remain to be completed," says Richard Doherty, manager of facilities planning. "The microbiology and ultrasound laboratories that will move to the third floor of the Rabb Building, the second phase of the Berenson Emergency Unit expansion, and the registration area and clinical directors' offices of Healthcare Associates on the first floor of the Rabb Building are among those areas yet to be completed."

When the first-floor connecting corridor from the Berenson Emergency Unit through the Rabb lobby to the Feldberg lobby is completed, the hospital will have a new "Main Street" providing easy access for patients and visitors from that part of the hospital.

This final component of The Project provides coherence for the entire Beth Israel "campus" — from the landscaping that unifies the front of the hospital along Brookline Avenue to the new internal "streets" to the design scheme and sign system that will make it far simpler and more pleasant for everyone to make their way around the hospital.

"We build upon the foundation laid by those who have gone before."

Excerpts from Remarks by Stanley H. Feldberg Beth Israel Annual Meeting November 11, 1984

The long chain of events that led to this fine moment began four years ago when the hospital's board of trustees, after much thought and deliberation, determined that for Beth Israel to continue toward the 21st century as the great institution that it is, a major effort would have to be undertaken to modernize and add to the hospital's facilities. That was the beginning of what was to become known as The Project — our building and renovation program for progress in patient care, teaching, and research.

One thing was clear: In no way would the grand plans we were beginning to envision be capable of being brought to reality without the active support and enthusiasm not only of the Beth Israel family itself, but of the entire community as well.

Our first step was to approach Combined Jewish Philanthropies, without whose assent and encouragement nothing of the scale we envisioned could possibly even have begun. It was no simple decision for CJP, which had already embarked on a major capital campaign for what would become the splendid Leventhal-Sidman Jewish Community Center on the Gosman Campus. They had the vision and the courage to see, however, that both that program and the proposed drive for Beth Israel Hospital were in the best interest of the community as a whole, and that the community would be able to support both.

Thus was born The Project.

The Project was to be funded by an $81-million bond issue and equity financing of $12.3 million to be raised in the community. The program called for the construction of three new buildings: one to house the growing biomedical research programs of the hospital; another to add four new floors for inpatient medical and surgical units and a new labor and delivery suite; and a third to accommodate a new and remodeled Berenson Emergency Unit, radiation therapy unit, medical records department, clinical laboratories, and an expanded Morse Medical Intensive Care Unit. In addition, other areas of the hospital were to be renovated so that, among other improvements, all Beth Israel inpatient rooms would eventually be of comparable quality and size.

The bond issue was successfully made and subsequently refinanced due in a large measure to the astute and perceptive leadership of our chairman, Eliot I. Snider.

The new buildings are all up and occupied, and we are making progress on the dramatic renovation of the Stoneman Building. Today, the hospital is well on its way to meeting the physical requirements of the 21st century institution that we all envisioned at the beginning.

It is a great honor to have served with a group of individuals who dedicated their considerable talent and their time to bringing The Project to reality. I will mention those who took particular roles of leadership, and who honor all of us by their efforts: chairman of the board, Eliot I. Snider; chairman of the leadership campaign, George J. Katz; and the chairman of the pacesetter effort, Frank A. Morse. One of the most heartwarming aspects of the drive for financing The Project has been the enthusiasm and active participation of members of our medical staff. For their leadership in this endeavor, we are all deeply indebted to Dr. Harris Yett, Dr. Ronald Weintraub, and Dr. Theodore Steinman among the staff; and to David Dolins, executive vice president and director of Beth Israel, who played a key role in energizing the participation of the medical staff.

In no way could The Project have succeeded without the administrative leadership of the hospital's president, Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin. Without his energetic support and his embodiment of the spirit that makes Beth Israel the place that it is, no such major endeavor could even have been contemplated.

Finally, nothing as major as the campaign for The Project could succeed without the talent and dedication of a professional staff. We are all extremely fortunate that the fundraising efforts of this hospital function through the division headed by the vice president for development, Helaine Miller. She, along with Betsy Tarlin and Margie Paley, have given unstintingly of their considerable talent, drive, and enthusiasm to bring us here today.

All of these individuals join the many members of the Beth Israel family and our concerned community in what might be described as the pantheon of The Project — the aggregation of those whose efforts are reflected in a hospital that now, more than ever before, can take its place as a world-renowned leader in providing the best of health care and the promise of continuing that tradition into the years to come.

We build upon the foundation laid by those who have gone before, and no recounting of those to whom honor is due can be complete without pointing to the stalwart and dedicated visionaries who have always had the courage and the wisdom to make the right decisions at turning points in the history of the hospital. The Project is one of those turning points, and I think the highest honor we can give it is to say that it follows in the tradition of similar endeavors of years past. As I have said before in this forum, we have the great good fortune to stand on the shoulders of giants.

As you know, several major elements of The Project have been named as a result of the generosity of our donors.

The first of the triad of new buildings encompassed by The Project was named by the Charles A. Dana Foundation. The second building to be named was our new inpatient structure atop the Feldberg Building — the wonderful four-story facility named after the generosity of George and Evelyn Reisman.

I can now announce to you that the building up until today known as the Northeast Building has been named as the result of the generosity of a fine family in our community. That building, prominent in the new profile of Beth Israel facing Brookline Avenue, encompasses the marvelous new Berenson Emergency Unit, which is part of the Longwood Area Trauma Center; the radiation therapy department; medical records; an enlarged and renovated Morse Medical Intensive Care Unit; and certain clinical laboratories.

It is, indeed, a major new facility of enormous importance to the hospital and its patients. It is my great privilege and honor to tell you that the former Northeast Building has been named after Mildred and Murray Finard.

The Finard Building, as it will be known, will forever reflect the generosity and devotion of an illustrious family, one that numbers among its members Mildred and Murray's son, William Finard, who is a trustee of the hospital.

This has been one of the most rewarding and invigorating experiences of my life, and the opportunity to work with all of you and with the entire Beth Israel family and the community it serves will always stand out in my memory as an unforgettable and cherished time. I am grateful beyond words for the experience and gratified beyond description for the outcome I have had the privilege to bring before you today.

"We trust that the Beth Israel Corporation will foster our imaginative thinking, enabling us to work more effectively from strength to strength."

Excerpts from Remarks by Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin Beth Israel Annual Meeting November 11, 1984

The world of medical care is changing today, with greater rapidity than at any time in the past. The knowledge base of medicine is about to take a giant step forward as techniques of molecular biology help us define more clearly the specifics of disease and health. Exciting prospects unfold, as exhilarating in their anticipation as they are complex in their achievement. Such advances — in cancer, heart disease, genetics; in prevention of illness and maintenance of health — are not only complex, they are costly, too, and therein lies the rub. Costs of care in this country and elsewhere are rising,and in the eyes of many who pay for that care today, can no longer be sustained. And when care is too costly, research and teaching lose support, and progress and quality begin to lose out.

Two sets of forces have been brought to bear on the costs of care, measures to increase regulation and measures to increase competition among providers of care. And they are achieving results, despite the distress competition and regulation might be causing among hospitals and doctors and even patients. For example, the number of hospital days per thousand among the population is declining, as the average hospital stay shortens, and as more care is rendered on an ambulatory rather than an inpatient basis. As a result, an overall excess of hospital beds is perceived, despite the aging of the population. Similarly, a surfeit of physicians is recognized as well as maldistribution in terms of specialty distribution and geography of practice location. Pressures are mounting on all hospitals to maintain a positive bottom line and do all that is felt to be their community responsibility and the professional responsibility of the physicians, nurses, and other care-givers.

In this atmosphere, the likelihood of hospitals doing the very best they can for their constituency is being assaulted. Some hospitals have gone out of business. Others have revolutionized their management, joining up with national for-profit chains. Still others see their direction as merger or affiliation with one or more nearby agencies to form a modest system. The key is to position the institution better in an increasingly competitive, increasingly hostile environment.

Confronted with the need for new, nontraditional responses to new, nontraditional stresses, and with the shackles that have been applied, hospitals have begun to ask the question, "Should we not form some other related organization which is not a hospital, which is not bound down as we are, and which has the capacity to act in new ways with more freedom, to achieve for us the gains we cannot make directly?"

Of late, the answer has been coming in the affirmative, particularly as hospitals appreciate that they can no longer restrict their interests and activities to that which happens under their roofs; hospitals must reach out throughout their towns and cities and in the case of teaching hospitals such as Beth Israel, to issues of care, prevention, training, teaching, and research on a national basis. The payer is less and less interested in cost per visit or cost per day, but rather is concerned with the cost per year for health care for the average insured. That means the payer is looking more and more to systems of care — care in the office, and in the community hospital, and in the teaching hospital, and in the post-acute discharge facility, and home care — and to a related capacity for health education and prevention, and asking how all these can be put together to provide a guaranteed package of benefits at a guaranteed annual cost. And that is precisely what is happening; hospitals are linking up with physicians in office practice, with nursing homes, with other hospitals, with home care operations to fashion increasingly inclusive systems to meet these newly voiced needs. Since hospitals cannot of themselves make such liaisons readily, the notion has arisen of new corporations that are not hospitals to create the umbrella under which health care providers can gather, relate, and coordinate, increasing their chances to be efficient in fulfillment of their own institutional missions.

Thus far, in this less than charitable external environment, Beth Israel has been singularly fortunate; our occupancy remains high, our bottom line is favorable. But the world changes as we walk upon it, as J. Robert Oppenheimer once wrote, and we must plan for the future and manage it, rather than be tossed about, passive and falsely secure that nothing will happen to Beth Israel that we cannot fix.

Already we have begun to look at opportunities. Linkages with community hospital care have already been established, for example, with the Harvard Community Health Plan and its hospital on Parker Hill. Now we are asking in the new environment what sorts of new linkages would be appropriate and of mutual advantage with other hospitals, with nursing homes, with other agencies. And how would such linkages be developed, retaining the individuality of cooperating agencies yet with overall business coordination to make the system work?

Out of these thoughts emerged the notion of corporate restructuring, the formation of a linkage corporation, to be called the Beth Israel Corporation, to help Beth Israel Hospital fulfill its basic mission in these stressful times by using its nonhospital status and coordinating role to do those things we and other institutions that might join with us cannot do as hospitals. We use the term "linkage" corporation to emphasize the linkage of mission and interests among the two, Beth Israel Corporation and Beth Israel Hospital, and underscore that it is membership, not stock ownership, that sustains the involvement.

The Beth Israel Corporation is a linkage or parent corporation expressly created to help the hospital fulfill its mission in these changing and challenging times. The corporation does not drain any of the traditional fiduciary responsibilities of hospital trustees; rather, it proposes to work to make hospital trusteeship even more desirable as Beth Israel moves into the future. We hope that the idea of system-building for strength becomes shared with selected institutions — now totally independent but with the possibility of becoming sister institutions in the future, linked through the corporation yet retaining their individuality — in order to strengthen our mutual capacity to serve the community. Other new corporations may arise from within our own ranks, for example, to deal with nearby real estate. We trust that the Beth Israel Corporation will foster our imaginative thinking and action, enabling us to work more effectively from strength to strength in the interests of your good health, and for service and scholarship of which Beth Israel can justly be proud.

"Beth Israel is a different place from the others. It's different because of the particular attention we pay to the human values of medical care."

Excerpts from Remarks by Eliot I. Snider Beth Israel Annual Meeting November 11, 1984

I'd like to talk a little about the character or personality of the hospital as I see it.

We all know that Beth Israel is a major teaching hospital — a pre-eminent one that has a merited reputation as a world-famous medical center. But we also know that there are other world-class teaching hospitals that provide excellent care and make prodigious advances in scholarship and research. A few of those institutions are located right here in Boston.

So a very reasonable question to ask is: Now that we know where Beth Israel fits in among its peer institutions, how does it differ from them? What do we provide that's any different from what is available at all those other places?

I think that's where character or personality fits in. Beth Israel is a different place from the others. It's different because of the particular attention we pay to the human values of medical care. It's different because so many of us who are involved with the hospital in various capacities — staff, employees, patients, volunteers, trustees, donors — seem to care so deeply about the place. We share a sense that what benefits the hospital benefits us, and that we collectively and individually are able to make a contribution of some sort for the benefit of the institution and for all of those who play a part in its history.

There's an old adage that used to be a theme in a highly successful advertising campaign: "Ask the person who owns one." In the case of a hospital, if you want to know how it's doing, ask its patients. That happens to be something we do all the time, and the fact that the hospital seems to be so successful may rest in part on the fact that we obviously listen to the answers and react to them.

I'd like to share a few patients' reactions that I found particularly telling. These are the words of our patients, and through them I think you get one perspective of the character of our hospital.

"The camaraderie between the nurses reflects their positive attitudes toward their positions at BI."

"The concern and friendliness of all the personnel was amazing. They gave me great confidence in the hospital and a feeling that I was very important and special."

"I feel like I met new friends, not just nurses."

"The spirit of love and care at Beth Israel! People get better when there is a positive attitude and energy, and BI seems to have this and more!"

"The new labor and delivery suites are wonderful! At a time when you're a little apprehensive it sure helps to be in such comfortable surroundings."

"...a wonderful combination of professionalism and TLC."

"You have a clean, bright, friendly, and very well-staffed hospital, and I appreciate your excellence a great deal."

"The surroundings made my stay great. I actually miss the hospital!"

Any time you hear someone who has spent time at a hospital say they actually miss the place, I suggest that tells you something about the institution.

The comments indicate to me that our patients appreciate not only the obvious things — the excellence of the medical care, the professionalism of the nurses, for example — but other important qualities as well. For example, it's clear that people appreciate the fact that Beth Israel is a clean hospital. That speaks to the care with which everyone on the staff treats patients, and the respect they have for the way the hospital appears to others. It means that the personality of the place permeates it, and that everyone who works there feels a part of it and feels invested in it.

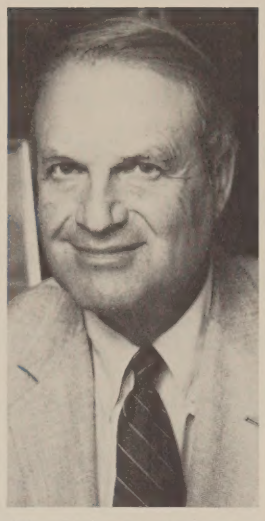
Another reaction that is clear is that patients truly appreciate the thought and effort that go into the design of the institution. The effort that has gone into making the hospital a welcoming, comfortable, and efficient place is exemplified by The Project, whose success we celebrate today. And that in turn speaks to perhaps the most significant contribution to the character of the hospital — the care and commitment that it has always received from the community that has nourished the hospital from the beginning. It was the community's vision, even its daring, that established Beth Israel in the first place, and it is the community to which we turn now as we have in the past for the devotion and generosity that have always made the difference between "just another hospital" and Beth Israel.

Just as we have been blessed with a community that provides support in so many ways — including the leadership of the hospital — so we are twice-blessed with a medical and nursing staff whose high standards and compassion have always ensured the very best and most personal care for our patients. And not to be forgotten among our blessings is an administrative team that is truly a team — a seasoned group of individuals whose longevity as a management group is remarkable among hospitals.

This is, indeed, a place of quality and one of character. It is a great hospital that stands taller than so many others because of the human factor that influences everything within it. And that is a quality to celebrate and to encourage in the years to come. It is, in fact, one of our greatest strengths.

New Trustees at Beth Israel Hospital

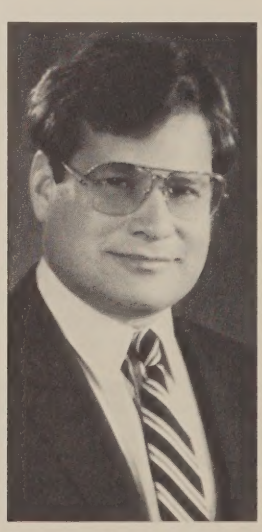
The Beth Israel Hospital Association elected four new members to its board of trustees at the 69th annual meeting.



Allyn L. Levy, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the Patriot Bancorporation, was graduated from Syracuse University (AB). He has served the business community as president of Garden City Trust of Newton, president of Capitol Financial Corporation, and member of the New England Council for Economic Development. He is active in community organizations such as the Leventhal-Sidman Jewish Community Center, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, The Recuperative Center, the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston, the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association of Eastern Massachusetts, and Temple Israel of Boston. Levy and his wife, Judith, Newton residents, are the parents of Steven, Jane, and Randy.

Alan J. Tichnor, independent consultant for graphic arts, packaging, marketing, and manufacturing, was graduated from the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania (BS). He has served the business community as owner of Colourpicture Publishers, Inc., a postcard and greeting card company, for 40 years. He was a member of the board of directors of the National Association of Printers and Lithographers and president of Postcard Manufacturers of America. Active in the community, Tichnor is president of the New England Region of the United Synagogues of America, a member of the executive board of Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston, the Synagogue Council of Massachusetts, and the board of overseers of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, where he was the 1978 recipient of the community service award. He and his wife, Marjorie, Newton residents, are the parents of Susan Alfred, Michael, Amy, and Nancy.

Manuel Rosenberg, chairman of the board of Morse Shoe, Inc., was graduated from Harvard College (AB) and Harvard Business School (MBA). He has served the community as trustee of the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary, trustee of Judge Baker Guidance Center, and director of Two/Ten Association, a national association of shoe manufacturers. He and his wife, Audray, Canton residents, are the parents of Peter and Beth.



Evan L. Weston, vice president and northeast regional manager for The Abacus Group, a real estate mortgage firm, served as ex-officio member of the board of trustees at Beth Israel as the president of the Men's Associates before being named a trustee. Weston was graduated from Tufts University (BA). He has served the business community as a member of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board, International Foundation of Employee Benefit Plans, Pension Real Estate Association, National Association of Corporate Real Estate, and the National Association of Industrial and Office Parks. He is active in the community as a member of the Anti-Defamation League, where he is chairman of the program committee, and a member of the executive board and the civil rights committee. He has been active in fundraising for Temple Shir Tikva, Wayland. Weston and his wife, Barbara, Sudbury residents, are the parents of Steven, Rebecca, Lori, Stephanie, and Todd.

Honored Doctors

At the annual meeting the hospital paid tribute to 27 physicians and dentists celebrating significant milestones of service. Each honoree was presented a certificate expressing gratitude for contributing to the quality of medical care at Beth Israel over the years.

Honorary Trustees

Four of Beth Israel's trustees were named honorary trustees at the hospital's annual meeting. Milton Berger, Leo Dunn, Bertram R. Paley, and Mortimer B. Zuckerman were presented certificates commending each for his "loyal and devoted service as a trustee of Beth Israel Hospital on the occasion of election as an honorary trustee for life."

In Memoriam

During the past year Beth Israel lost several friends and colleagues whose passing the hospital mourned at the annual meeting. Said chairman Phillip J. Nexon, "They gave much of themselves to us personally and professionally. Although we are saddened by their loss, the memories of their friendship and of their contributions to our hospital are alive and with us today. Their good deeds stand as their enduring monuments." They are: Dr. Norman Geschwind, Dr. Joseph Goldman, Dr. Edward Kaplan, Dr. Henry Kontoff, Dr. Susan Levene, Dr. Nathan Sidel, Susan Wise, PhD, and Dr. Bernard Zonderman of the medical staff; Joseph F. Ford, Harry Remis, Joseph G. Weisberg, and Rudolph H. Wyner, honorary trustees; and Frances Dillon, Kenneth Gladden, William Murphy, Jean Pierre, Patricia Slagle, and Melvin Tyler, employees.

Beth Israel Hospital's BIG Campaign has best year Beth Israel Hospital's Annual Giving Campaign (BIG) for 1984 exceeded last year's total and ended its best year with a total of $455,977. More than 3,000 individuals, corporations, and foundations contributed to its success. The annual campaign focuses on a number of key groups including trustees, physicians, administrators, foundations, corporations, and former patients. Goals for nearly all of these groups were met or exceeded. Stanley J. Hatoff, chairman of the hospital's BIG committee, said, "I am delighted with this response from the friends and members of the Beth Israel family. It shows the broad-based support the hospital enjoys in the community it serves."

White is Honored for "Profiles in Medicine"

Dr. Augustus A. White, III, orthopedic surgeon-in-chief at Beth Israel and professor of orthopedic surgery at Harvard Medical School, was recently honored at a reception to screen the latest addition to the "Profiles in Medicine" videotape series, held at the Countway Library of Harvard Medical School. Sponsored by the Joint Committee on the Status of Women, Harvard Medical Area Office of Academic Careers, Harvard Medical School Standing Committee on Minorities, and the Office for Student Affairs at Harvard Medical School, the tape, illuminating the spectrum of responsibilities and endeavors in which Dr. White is involved as an orthopedic surgeon and professor, was created as part of a continuing series to profile minority and women physicians and scientists in the Harvard Medical Area.

At a cocktail reception following the business meeting, Rabb was cited for more than three decades of community leadership following his chairmanship of the Beth Israel Hospital board. Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin (left), president of the hospital, presented an album of photographic and documentary memorabilia to Rabb. Highlighting the occasion was a display of newspaper reprints illustrating the growth of the hospital. The historic album and displays were prepared by Beth Israel Archivist Ruth Freiman.

Fourth Baby Conceived by IVF Born at Beth Israel

The fourth baby conceived in Massachusetts by in vitro fertilization (IVF) was born recently at Beth Israel to a 42-year-old Massachusetts woman and her husband. The mother is believed to be the oldest woman on record in the United States to have given birth to a baby conceived through in vitro fertilization.

The baby was conceived through IVF techniques at Beth Israel. IVF involves removing one or more eggs from the woman's ovaries and placing them in a solution along with sperm from the woman's husband. All fertilized eggs are then inserted in the uterus. If the resulting embryo implants in the uterine wall, it can develop to term and be delivered naturally. Dr. Melvin Taymor, chief of the division of reproductive endocrinology and infertility at Beth Israel, is director of the program, and Dr. Machelle Seibel, and Dr. Selwyn Oskowitz, are associated with him. Katie Louise Harwood, the first baby conceived in Massachusetts through IVF techniques, was born at Beth Israel in July, 1984. There have been 18 pregnancies, including six births, among couples participating in the Beth Israel program.

About Beth Israel Hospital

Highlights of 1984

- The Project, Beth Israel's five-year $81-million building program for new and renovated facilities, moved toward a successful conclusion in 1984:

– Contributions to the capital campaign reached and exceeded the original goal of $12.3 million in equity financing and by January 1, 1985, were at $16.4 million. All contributions in excess of the original goal will be directed to a special capital fund established by the executive committee to finance needed capital work in the future.

– The Reisman Building, a four-story structure atop the Feldberg Building, is completely furnished and occupied, and was dedicated in June at a ceremony in the Ullian Dining Area honoring George and Evelyn Reisman and other major donors who contributed to The Project.

– The Northeast Building was named the Finard Building for the contribution of Murray and Mildred Finard. The Finard Building houses a new and renovated Berenson Emergency Unit, radiation therapy, medical records, clinical laboratories, and an enlarged and renovated Morse Medical Intensive Care Unit. The Finard Building will be dedicated on May 5, 1985.

– Renovations to the Stoneman Building and other areas of the hospital are proceeding and eventually all Beth Israel inpatient rooms will be of comparable quality and size.

- Beth Israel Corporation was formed as a linkage or parent corporation under which health care providers can coordinate their activities to fulfill their own institutional missions.

- The first four babies conceived by in vitro fertilization (IVF) in Massachusetts were born at Beth Israel. The babies, two girls and two boys, were all conceived through IVF techniques at Beth Israel. One of the IVF mothers, a 42-year-old woman, is believed to be the oldest woman in the United States to have given birth to an IVF baby. There have been 18 pregnancies, including six births, in Beth Israel's IVF program.

- Beth Israel participated in "Wellbeing for You and Your Family," a health fair sponsored by the Leventhal-Sidman Jewish Community Center on the Gosman Campus. Beth Israel and the Jewish Community Center also cosponsored a series of health lectures, demonstrations, and sports medicine clinics throughout the year. The Beth Israel Men's Associates courses on cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) are now offered through the Center.

- The Women's Auxiliary sponsored "Event 84 — The Grand Bostonians" and completed funding for the Women's Auxiliary Neonatal Special Care Unit on Reisman 10.

- Beth Israel established an eight-bed inpatient oncology unit staffed by highly skilled and specially trained oncology nurses to provide the latest in cancer care and support to patients and their families.

- Beth Israel staff members published papers documenting major advances in biomedical and clinical research:

– Surgeon-in-chief William Silen, MD, is the principal investigator for a $394,443 grant from the National Institute of Arthritis, Diabetes, and Digestive Diseases for the establishment of a center for research into the structure and function of the digestive system and digestive diseases. Dr. Silen was named director of the Harvard Digestive Diseases Center.

– A widely-used treatment for severe psoriasis involving the combination of an oral medication and exposure to ultraviolet light carries a risk of skin cancer that increases with intensity and duration of treatment.

– A previously unsuspected link between chronic sexual impotence and one form of epilepsy may suggest more effective treatment for some forms of chronic sexual dysfunction.

– Many of the increasing number of homeless people wandering the streets of America's cities are mentally ill and in need of psychiatric and medical services.

- Three Beth Israel physicians were appointed to newly-endowed professorships at the Harvard Medical School.

– Dr. Sven Paulin, radiologist-in-chief, was appointed to the first Miriam H. Stoneman Professorship.

– Dr. Raj K. Goyal, chief of gastroenterology, was appointed to the Charlotte F. and Irving W. Rabb Professorship of Medicine.

– Dr. William Grossman, chief of cardiology, was appointed to the Herman Dana Professorship of Medicine.

Beth Israel Giving (BIG) Fiscal Year 1984

Beth Israel Giving (BIG) is the hospital's annual campaign. Funds raised through BIG are used for the general operating expenses of the hospital. During this fiscal year, September 25, 1983 through September 29, 1984, the individuals and organizations whose names appear below made contributions to the hospital through one of four donor clubs.

Century Club

The Century Club recognizes those donors who have contributed $100-$249 in fiscal year 1984.

Planned Gifts

Beth Israel's Planned Giving Program offers new opportunities for charitable support. It provides various ways of planned giving which offer immediate benefits to the donor and long-range benefits to both the donor and the hospital.

Planned giving makes it possible for those who might want to help Beth Israel to do so without parting with spendable income. The planned giving options often give donors an increase in immediate tax deduction, an avoidance of capital gains tax, and a possible reduction in costly estate taxes.

Matching Gift Companies

Through their corporate matching gift programs, the companies listed below have contributed to BIG (Beth Israel Giving) during the 1984 fiscal year. Corporate sponsorship of this kind allows individual contributors to double sometimes triple the amount of their gifts to Beth Israel. At the same time, this generosity affords Beth Israel the benefits that corporate sponsorship makes possible.

Beatrice Foods Company
Digital Equipment Corporation
The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States
GCC Communications
The Gillette Company
Hanesco Insurance Company, Inc.
IBM
International Minerals & Chemical Corporation
John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company
Pfizer, Inc.
Polaroid Foundation, Inc.
Westinghouse Electric Fund

Donors to THE PROJECT

The success of Beth Israel's $12.3-million capital campaign to raise funds for The Project is a milestone in the hospital's fundraising efforts. Through the unprecedented support of so many trustees, physicians, administrators, and community members, Beth Israel has been able to finance the construction of new facilities necessary to maintain its role as a leader in the delivery of high quality patient care, teaching, and research. It is with great gratitude that we list the names of those individuals and organizations who have made pledges or gifts to The Project as of February 15, 1985.

About Beth Israel Hospital

Boston's Beth Israel Hospital is a nonprofit institution which provides care for patients of any race, creed, color, or nationality and conducts educational and research activities which promote patient care. Established in 1916 by the Boston Jewish community to meet the needs of the growing immigrant population, Beth Israel moved to its current location in 1928 at which time its affiliation with Harvard Medical School began.

Today Beth Israel has:

460 adult inpatient beds in medicine, surgery, obstetrics/gynecology, orthopedics, psychiatry, neurosurgery, neuromedicine, and medical and surgical intensive care units. Over 19,000 inpatients receive treatment each year.

53 bassinets plus 12 in a Special Care Nursery (Level II) for nearly 4,000 babies delivered annually.

The 24-hour Berenson Emergency Unit, part of the Longwood Area Trauma Center, with over 32,000 visits annually.

An innovative general medical center for ambulatory care (BI Healthcare Associates) and outpatient specialty units with more than 133,000 visits each year.

A Home Care program providing more than 7,000 visits to homebound, chronically ill patients by nurse practitioners, physicians, or social workers working as a team.

Beth Israel Hospital has a tradition of establishing programs which encourage sensitive and personalized care, such as:

Patients' Rights — The hospital was the first to issue a written statement ("The Rights of Patients," 1972) including the rights to be heard and responded to by hospital personnel, to privacy, personal dignity and respect, and to detailed information. The statement is distributed to each patient admitted and to each new employee.

Primary Nursing — Each patient is assigned a registered nurse who is responsible for developing a 24-hour nursing care plan, looking after the patient while on duty, and monitoring the care while others are on duty. This hospital-wide system allows nurses to give more individual, personalized care.

As a teaching hospital, Beth Israel provides professional training to over 1,200 students each year. The range of learning is wide:

Beth Israel is one of three major teaching facilities for Harvard Medical School where most of its physicians hold faculty appointments.

There are over 230 interns and residents each year in medicine, surgery, pathology, and other medical specialties as well as postgraduate fellows. Beth Israel has led the country in providing innovative training programs in geriatrics and primary care medicine.

Nursing students from Boston University, Boston College, Northeastern University, Simmons College, and the University of Massachusetts; social work students from Smith College and Simmons College; dietary interns; students in pharmacy, medical technology, physical and occupational therapy, respiratory therapy, and radiologic technology all receive part of their clinical education at Beth Israel.

Research at Beth Israel is supported by grants from private foundations and government agencies.

Biomedical research is conducted at the hospital's Charles A. Dana Research Institute.

Since 1973 the oldest clinical research facility in the country, Harvard's Thorndike Laboratories, has been located at Beth Israel. It is now housed in the hospital's new Charles A. Dana Research Building, completed in 1982.

A Clinical Research Center maintains 10 beds for patients directly involved in scientific study.

Research is conducted in cardiology, endocrinology, nutrition, nephrology, surgery, neurology, and obstetrics.

Morse Medical Intensive Care Unit Completed

A new 12-bed coronary care unit (CCU), part of the Morse Medical Intensive Care Unit, is now complete and fully operational. Located on the fourth floor of Beth Israel's recently named Finard Building, the coronary care unit is for patients who have undergone such procedures as balloon angioplasty to open clogged arteries, streptokinase infusion to dissolve arterial blood clots following a heart attack, or implantation of an artificial pacemaker.

The new unit is equipped with the latest in technology and includes its own special procedure room, according to Dr. Richard Pasternak, CCU director. Life-saving techniques such as thrombolysis and balloon catheterization — formerly performed in an isolated laboratory — can now be done in the coronary care unit itself.

In addition to a full range of diagnostic and therapeutic procedures, the new unit is designed to bring together all cardiac care services, including electrocardiography, echocardiography, and exercise-testing areas; a family consultation room; and a 25-bed facility specially designated for intermediate cardiac care.

New Oncology Inpatient Unit at Beth Israel

Beth Israel has taken an important new step in providing the latest in cancer care for its patients. An eight-bed oncology inpatient unit has been staffed by highly-skilled and specially-trained clinical oncology nurses. The unit emphasizes the administration of chemotherapy and care of patients receiving complex treatment programs and bone marrow transplant recipients. "Beth Israel is confident that the development of this inpatient unit, in conjunction with its well established ambulatory hematology-oncology program, will contribute to maintaining a clinical cancer program that is second to none," says Dr. Lowell Schnipper, chief of the division of medical oncology.

Rosenfield is Bulian Lecturer Dr. Allan Rosenfield, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons, was guest lecturer at Beth Israel's third annual Dr. Max J. Bulian Memorial Lecture. His topic was "Current Controversies in Population Control."

Dr. Bulian was a prominent member of the obstetrics and gynecology staff at Beth Israel, and in 1981 an outpouring of gifts in his memory enabled the hospital and department to establish the memorial lecture fund named after him.

Eisenberg is Thurman Lecturer Dr. Leon M. Eisenberg, chairman of the department of social medicine and health policy, Presley Professor of Social Medicine, and professor of psychiatry at Harvard Medical School, was the guest lecturer at Beth Israel's 10th annual Dr. Aaron Thurman Lecture. His topic was "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men: Rudolf Virchow and the Ethics of Medicine."

The Thurman Lecture was established in 1975 by the family of the late Dr. Aaron Thurman, who was one of the first surgeons associated with Beth Israel. Traditionally on the subject of medical ethics, the lecture is part of the hospital's Seminars in Medicine.

BI and JCC Cosponsor Health and Fitness Day

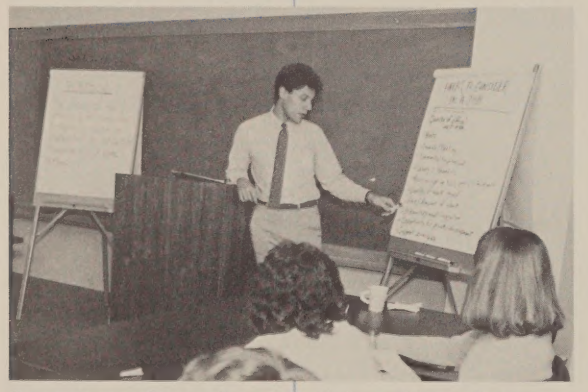
Beth Israel Hospital and the Leventhal-Sidman Jewish Community Center recently cosponsored Wellbeing for You and Your Family, a health fair held on the Gosman Campus in Newton Centre.

The afternoon featured health lectures, counseling, demonstrations, screening and stress tests, films, displays, and distribution of educational materials, free "L'Chaim!" buttons, balloons, and healthful snacks. Guests had the opportunity to discuss health care with a wide range of professionals from Beth Israel including physicians, nurses, occupational and physical therapists, dietitians, pharmacists, and podiatrists.

One of the highlights of the day was the guest appearance of Boston Red Sox baseball star Jim Rice. Rice signed autographs and posed for complimentary photographs with visitors to the health fair.

Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin, president of Beth Israel, visits a Beth Israel booth at the health fair.

Health and Fitness Day offers opportunities for participation to people of all ages.



Synagogue Council and Beth Israel Hospital collaborate on development programs Beth Israel's department of training and development, managed by Emanuel Berger, is providing the expertise for seminars designed to enhance the professional skills of synagogue workers. These programs are sponsored jointly by the Synagogue Council of Massachusetts, the United Synagogues of America, and the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

Recent seminar topics include "Effective Client Interaction for Secretaries," and "Professional Training in the Fields of Management and Accounting for Synagogue Administrators." Both seminars emphasize effective use of community resources.

Social Work Grand Rounds series for 1984-1985 Lisa Sutton, LICSW (left), spoke on "Negative Therapeutic Reaction" at a recent Social Work Grand Rounds lecture. Traditionally on the subject of clinical and policy issues, the well attended lectures are open to health and mental health professionals from Beth Israel and other Longwood Medical Area hospitals. For further information and a lecture schedule call Beth Israel's department of social services, 735-3421.

Nurses' Alumnae Association presents nursing seminar The Beth Israel Nurses' Alumnae Association recently presented "Images of Nursing in the Mass Media" featuring guest lecturers from the University of Michigan, Philip A. Kalisch (left), professor of history, politics, and economics of nursing; and Beatrice J. Kalisch (right), Titus Professor of Nursing. The seminar, offered free to Beth Israel nurses and alumni, was the first lecture in the ninth annual series of nursing seminars.

BI and JCC cosponsor health and fitness programs Beth Israel and the Leventhal-Sidman Jewish Community Center are cosponsoring an ongoing series of health and fitness programs including cardiac rehabilitation for men and women who have had heart attacks or those who are at high risk for heart attacks; cardiopulmonary resuscitation, offering hands-on training and qualifying individuals for the American Heart Association Heartsaver certification; stress management, illustrating coping techniques for adults and children; and weight control for those who want to lose weight or maintain their current weight.

Medically supervised and limited in size, all courses are held on the Gosman Campus of the JCC in Newton Centre.

President's Leadership Task Force tours Beth Israel *The President's Leadership Task Force recently participated in a tour of Beth Israel, organized by Joan B. Mendelsohn, director of community relations. Tour sites included 10 Reisman, the Dana Research Building, and the Anna and Samuel Pinanski Video Production Center. Pictured from left: Joan B. Learning To Relax To Ease The Pain

mind/body effect

Although it's true that stress contributes to illness, the promising news is that stress reduction is within our control, that we can—to a large degree—influence and improve, our stamina, our health, our well-being...

Federal research begins into disease

BOSTON (AP) — The federal government is launching a research drive at five centers nationwide to learn more about Alzheimer's disease, called "one of the most feared afflictions in America."

The first year of research at the centers will be funded with $3.5 million in grants, U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler said on Monday at a news conference.

Harvard Heads New Alzheimer Center

United States Secretary of Health and Human Services Margaret Heckler announced on Monday that Harvard Medical School and its affiliate, Massachusetts General Hospital (MGH), will lead one of five new research centers studying Alzheimer's Disease.

Heckler pledged $3.5 million from the National Institute on Aging next year and $16.6 million over five years for the five centers, which will study degenerative mental deterioration, also known as senile dementia.

Twenty-two universities competed for the chance to have an Alzheimer's Disease Research Center (ADRC), but only the "five strongest" programs were selected, Heckler said at a Monday press conference, adding that "each of these institutions already has an impressive research record in

High doses of lecithin might help Alzheimer's patients, researcher says

High doses of lecithin, in some cases show potential for arresting the progressive confusion and memory loss found in patients with Alzheimer's disease, says a British researcher.

Dr. Raymond Levy, chief of the Old Age Psychiatry section at the Institute of Neurology in London, last week told neuroscientists and students at MIT that improvement in eight out of 24 patients who had large amounts of lecithin added to their diets for six months to a year and an additional dose at bedtime, Levy said.

The need for further investigation was also noted by Dr. Marsel Mesulam, Beth Israel Hospital neurologist, and Dr. John H. Growdon, neurologist at Massachusetts General Hospital. Mesulam said Growdon "We understand the course of Alzheimer's disease. The disease remains, none at Lilly in 1976. I latest to each aspect of details re- large of Medicine in 1978, I defect remain. Patient Entertainment Program at Beth Israel
Boston Symphony Orchestra Concertmaster Malcolm Lowe recently performed at Beth Israel Hospital as part of the Patient Entertainment Program (PEP). Lowe, appointed this year as the 10th BSO concertmaster, succeeds Joseph Silverstein. He was concertmaster of the Orchestre Symphonique de Quebec from 1977 to 1983, and concertmaster of the Worcester Symphony during the 1983-84 season. During his PEP performance, Lowe, a violinist, was accompanied by Frederik Wanger, a pianist. PEP, produced and coordinated by Women's Auxiliary president Harriet Altman, is a series of professional performances videotaped at Beth Israel for the pleasure of an audience of patients, visitors, and hospital staff. PEP is aired daily at 2 pm on Channel 3, Beth Israel's closed-circuit television station.

Staff Activities

David Acker, MD, obstetrics and gynecology, was appointed course director at the Symposia Medicus, Update in Obstetrics and Gynecology in the Bahama Islands. Titles of the presentations were "Midforceps Delivery," "Amniocentesis and Ultrasound," "Clinical Management of Rh Disease," "The Obstetrician and Genetics," and "The Role of the Obstetrician in the Causation of Mental Retardation."

Laura Avakian, MA, vice president for human resources, lectured at the Florence Heller School of Brandeis University on "Preventive Labor Relations" to a graduate class in social policy.

Rabbi Terry R. Bard, chaplain, addressed the New England Federation of Temple Sisterhoods at their biennial meeting. The topics were "Family Concerns," "Alcohol and Chemical Dependency," and "Family Abuse." Rabbi Bard also spoke at the National Federation of Temple Brotherhoods on the subject of family crisis.

Menorah Presented to Beth Israel

A menorah by famed sculptor David Aronson was recently presented to Beth Israel in honor of Dora and the late Hyman Auerbach by their children, Dr. George and Harriet Altman, David and Evelyn Auerbach, and Howard D. and Jeanette Allen. Entitled "Angels of Light," the menorah depicts angelic figures ascending the "tree of life." It is a focus of attention in the hospital's main lobby where it is electrically lit every Sabbath and on appropriate holidays.
